LOGLINE

Assembly follows visionary artist Rashaad Newsome as he transforms a historic military facility into a Black queer utopia, blending art, AI, and performance. Through stunning visuals and deeply personal performances, Assembly captures the transformative power of creativity as a fractured community comes together to find strength, solidarity, and liberation.

SYNOPSIS

Assembly is a genre-defying film that blends documentary, performance art, and speculative storytelling to imagine Black and queer futures. The film follows internationally acclaimed artist Rashaad Newsome as he transforms the historic Park Avenue Armory—once a symbol of white military power—into a vibrant celebration of Black and queer culture through music, dance, holograms, projections, sculpture, and African fractal design.

To realize this ambitious vision, Newsome brings together an international ensemble of performers, including dancers from Brazil, Japan, and Ukraine who blend vogue with local movement traditions. Their personal stories of resilience and self-expression become central to the film, revealing how art can transform pain, exclusion, and struggle into collective power and joy.

Guiding the film is Being, a non-binary AI shaped by Black feminist thought. As both narrator and character, Being explores decolonization and imagines a future in which technology amplifies marginalized voices, mirroring the journeys of the artists whose lives and performances shape the work.

Anchored by ancestral memory, Assembly connects histories of enslavement, resistance, and survival to contemporary struggles for liberation. Through striking visuals, a journey to Ghana, and powerful moments such as a memorial for murdered Black trans women that becomes a protest march, the film celebrates intergenerational resilience while envisioning more just and expansive futures for Black and queer communities worldwide.

MEET THE CREATORS

Keenan Newman (cinematographer) is a queer California-based director and cinematographer focused on documentary, fiction and commercial work. He recently spent six months in rural Alaska filming Newtok, a feature documentary about the acute impact of climate change on a Yup'ik village, which premiered at DOC NYC.

Ash Verwiel (editor) is a trans & queer filmmaker and editor from the Netherlands, based in Oakland. With a focus on documentary film, often through an experimental lens, he also makes deeply personal work. Experimental short doc Heart Whispers (2020), which has won various festival awards, voices the struggle to find oneself as a trans person and immigrant from a rural small town.

M. Jamison (composer) is an interdisciplinary producer and musician based out of Minneapolis, MN. Her practice centers the narratives of Black trans/queer artists through record production, sound composition, film scoring, and community arts organizing. M's production and engineering work on Ms Boogie's debut album The Breakdown received positive reviews from them, The Cut, Pitchfork and Paper Magazine. Her collaborative compositions have been shown and performed in institutions such as The Shed, Walker Art Center, ArtCenter College of Design, and Park Avenue Armory, where she composed the original music for the Assembly performance. Assembly is M's debut as composer for a feature length film.

A dark, atmospheric photograph of a crowd of people at what appears to be a performance or event. In the foreground, a person with short, reddish-brown hair is looking upwards with an open mouth, as if singing or shouting. To their left, another person is holding up a smartphone to record. In the background, other audience members are visible, some with their arms raised. The overall mood is one of collective energy and participation.

DIRECTORS' STATEMENT

Assembly is more than just the title of the film and Rashaad's exhibition—it is a metaphor for the coming together of dozens of skilled, cutting-edge artists who contribute to a powerful collective voice project that manifests in a remarkable performance space. The result is a film that resists categorization—blurring the lines between art, documentary, performance, and activism.

At its core, Assembly is a synthesis of our two distinct creative approaches and a testament to the power of collaboration. Rashaad's background as a visual artist, AI creator, and VFX specialist—grounded in the practice of collage—shapes the film's vivid and cohesive aesthetic. His approach, which integrates performance, animation, sculpture, and music, creates a visual language that is both dynamic and immersive. This aesthetic blurs the line between the real and the surreal, inviting viewers into a deeply layered cinematic experience. By foregrounding both his own interiority and that of his subjects, Rashaad's vision brings emotional depth and a liberatory imagination to the narrative, transforming the way Black queer stories are seen and felt.

Johnny's extensive experience as a documentarian delivers a crucial counterbalance to the film's bold visual style. His career focuses on capturing the nuanced realities of queer lives, cultures and movements, using observational storytelling to reveal the subtle and often hidden complexities of identity and community. In Assembly, this approach allows the narrative to unfold through authentic moments of connection, tension, and transformation that infuse the larger issues with humanity and meaning. His ability to build trust with subjects as he documents their journeys offers viewers intimate access to the collaborative and deeply personal process behind the creation of this groundbreaking work.

Through merging our distinct approaches, the film becomes an assembly of voices, histories, and visions, showcasing how art can serve as both a mirror to society and a tool for liberation. In capturing this process, we invite audiences to experience the profound impact of collective artistry and the boundless potential of reimagining the world through creative collaboration.
